FROM THE PRESIDENT

An Apology

One of the things I did not anticipate when I arrived at this high office was the fact that I would be asked from time to time to respond to requests from individuals, businesses, special interest groups and the like on a wide range of things. Some were for publicity, some for money, and notably, one was for me to stop a practitioner from practicing law! As you can guess, this wide range of subjects produced an equally wide range of merit.

Fortunately, our association is set up so that the Executive Committee, not the President, usually makes the ultimate decision on an issue. Each member of your EC can, and frequently does, bring important issues to the group for discussion and action. This is the way it should be.

Several weeks ago I received a call from a colleague of long standing who requested that the RCBA extend an apology to those African-American lawyers who were denied admission to the association because of their race. As I have indicated previously, your association was one of the first bar associations in this state to offer its membership to all in the late 1960s. The apology was not demanded. It was a simple request followed by an itemization by this professional of feelings engendered by the denial of full collegial acceptance by peers, lawyers admitted to practice by our Supreme Court.

In our conversation, I reiterated that I alone could not speak for the association, but I promised this would be on the agenda at the EC meeting. I was not at all surprised when the group, with little discussion, unanimously agreed that the apology was something that should be done and authorized me to do it.

Times are different now than they were when the civil rights movement held our attention. I am the only member of the EC who was admitted to practice back then so it is appropriate that I speak for the group. Of all professions, the law should...

FROM THE EDITOR

Many of us have been involved in unpleasant lawsuits with lawyers who act unpleasantly. This is the sort of thing that makes me wish I had done something else for a living. Every deposition is a contest of intimidation. Every procedural requirement is fought over and insisted upon. Nothing, no matter how benign, is uncontested.

Most simply, it is not any fun at all. But, of course, no one promised that being a lawyer was going to be fun.

In these cases, I am tempted to respond in kind. It just makes my blood boil.

In television commercials and telephone books, lawyers promise to fight for clients. We often hear about zealous advocacy which is an important part of our jobs. But, as lawyers, we have other obligations. Our lawyer's oath very nicely summarizes what we are supposed to do. I keep a copy of it on my desk. Whenever I am tempted to fire off a nasty email or write an unpleasant letter, I give it a quick look. The oath reminds me of what we all promised in exchange for our licenses. We have an obligation to our clients, but we also have an obligation to our system of justice and to one another. We promised to follow a higher standard of conduct. Sometimes it is easy to forget that.

Some of you may have had experiences like this. Some of you may have been tempted to be less than civil to parties on the other side of a dispute. With that in mind, I am reprinting the lawyer's oath. Take a look. Pull out a pair of scissors. Cut it out, and tape it next to your telephone. We will all be better for it.

Lawyer's Oath

I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that:

I am duly qualified, according to the Constitution of this State, to exercise the duties of the office to which I have been appointed, and that I will, to the best of my ability, discharge those duties and will preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of this State and of the United States;

I will maintain the respect and courtesy due to courts of justice, judicial officers, and those who assist them;

To my clients, I pledge faithfulness, competence, diligence, good judgment and prompt communication;

To opposing parties and their counsel, I pledge fairness, integrity, and civility, not only in court, but also in all written and oral communications;

I will not pursue or maintain any suit or proceeding which appears to me to be unjust nor maintain any defenses except those I believe to be honestly debatable under the law of the land, but this obligation shall not prevent me from defending a person charged with a crime;

I will employ for the purpose of maintaining the causes confided to me only such means as are consistent with trust and honor and the principles of professionalism, and will never seek to mislead an opposing party, the judge or jury by a false statement of fact or law;

I will respect and preserve inviolate the confidences of my clients, and will accept no compensation in connection with a client's business except from the client or with the client's knowledge and approval;

I will maintain the dignity of the legal system and advance no fact prejudicial to the honor or reputation of a party or witness, unless required by the justice of the cause with which I am charged;

I will assist the defenseless or oppressed by ensuring that justice is available to all citizens and will not delay any person's cause for profit or malice;

[So help me God.]

TEXT PARTE - D. REECE WILLIAMS III

Even though he's practiced law for 46 years, tried over 200 cases, and garnered almost every award available, Columbia attorney D. Reece Williams III is a humble man who is easily approachable. I commented that his ancestors have been in America for over almost 400 years. "It's not anything to be proud of," he remarked. They were apparently run out of Scotland, then Ireland, then Pennsylvania, until they found their place in Lancaster County, South Carolina, like many Scotch-Irish who populated the Appalachian Mountains and their foothills. His people liked a good fight – fomenting the American Revolution and the Civil War. They fought for the Confederacy though they were not slaveholders. He tells a story of an ancestor who famously returned from the War with a bullet wound in his rear, rueful that he got shot so someone else could keep their slaves.

After the war, his forbearers settled into a less belligerent, more genteel lifestyle. A five-volume history of South Carolina published in 1920 lauds his grandfather, born in 1878, proclaiming that "David Reece Williams has made an enviable record as a South Carolina lawyer and has also been much in public affairs."

Like the two David Reece Williams before him, he does his fighting in the court room. Williams, a partner at Callison Tighe & Robinson, LLC, is a trial attorney engaged in complex litigation all over the country. A former president of the Richland County Bar Association, he has served in leadership positions in numerous national and local legal organizations. He spends much of his time teaching others how to succeed in the court room, and he is extremely helpful to those with less experience.

Williams is not a fan of using PowerPoint presentations at trial. Clearly, he is able to command the jury's attention without resort to such devices. You are stuck if something goes wrong, and something will go wrong, he comments. He told of a national conference where a seminar leader looked down his nose at him when Williams expressed his unwillingness to use complex technology in the court room. As the technophile attempted to showcase his state of the art gadgets, the electric power in the entire room was lost for ten minutes, leaving an empty room and a vindicated Williams.

Though he obviously loves the law, discussion of his charitable involvement also ignites a spark in him. He is a life member of the board of the Salvation Army, an organization he supports because it provides aid to those in extreme poverty even if they are not whom society has deemed to be "deserving poor."

With a refined manner and calm, thoughtful demeanor, he is, as attorney David Fedor said recently, "the classiest lawyer" around. He knows he caught me off guard when he suggested lunch at the United House of Prayer for All People, remarking the clientele was preferable to that of the trendy Vista. Driving down Read Street in Columbia – a former haven of crime and dilapidated houses – he explains that the denomination transformed its neighborhood. Now Read Street is lined with charming modest homes and is considerably safer than in days past. When we arrived at the striking sanctuary, I realized I was the last to know that the church serves a delicious, fresh, home-made meat and three vegetable lunch, with proceeds going to charitable works.

Williams is not cursed with the gigantic ego and overbearing demeanor prevalent among successful trial lawyers. He is a tremendous asset to the Richland County Bar and beyond.

CIVIL TRIAL SEMINARS

photos taken by Ward Bradley (go to www.richbar.org to download originals)

The Richland County Bar Association presented a series of CLEs on how to try a civil case. As a recent law school graduate who also aspires to be a trial lawyer, it was very exciting to me to attend these seminars. The seminars provided information useful to young lawyers and veterans alike. Best of all, it was free!

The series was held every Tuesday in September from 5:30 to 7:30 at the USC Law School Auditorium. It was well attended with about 100 people attending each night. In addition, law students were encouraged to attend to meet lawyers practicing in Richland County. At the break, refreshments are also provided for free.

On Tuesday September 13, Reese Williams and Bob Brown gave presentations on how to perform a direct examination. Dave Fedor gave opening remarks. All of these lawyers are members of the American Board of Trial Advocates. Among them, they have tried many cases, and by any measure, they are excellent litigators and speakers. Each of the speakers brought a unique perspective to the topic of direct examination.

Reese Williams focused on broad strategic methods and goals of a successful direct examination, while Bob Brown focused on tactics of executing a convincing direct examination.

Reese Williams explained that in doing a good direct examination, the lawyer should blend into the background so that the witness is able to command the full attention of the jury. The secret to doing this effectively is preparation and presentation of the witness as a credible person. The lawyer's preparation and the witness's credibility cannot be over emphasized.

Bob Brown gave a tactical play-by-play on dealing with certain types of witnesses. He explained the tactical advantages of a lawyer's position in the courtroom in relation to the jury while questioning the witness. His advice also addressed how to highlight a witness's positive qualities and minimize the negative.

This CLE is a terrific opportunity to learn from the experience of others. It is more than just war stories from years of practice; it is practical advice on how to prepare and try a case. - submitted by Brooks Biediger

AMENDMENT TO REGULATIONS FOR CONTINUING LEGAL EDUCATION

On August 5, 2010, South Carolina's five Justices signed an amendment to the Regulations for Mandatory Continuing Legal Education. Below is the amendment:

The South Carolina Bar has proposed amending the Regulations for Mandatory Continuing Legal Education in Appendix C to Part IV, South Carolina Appellate Court Rules, to provide that lawyers and judges be required to complete continuing legal education courses dealing with substance abuse or mental health issues. The Bar notes members of the legal profession tend to suffer from higher rates of depression, substance abuse, and suicide than other professions, and the Bar believes such instruction may help lower those rates.

Pursuant to Article V, §4, of the South Carolina Constitution, we hereby amend Regulation II of the Appendix C to Part IV, South Carolina Appellate Court Rules, to require that, at least once every three annual reporting periods, attorneys and judges complete one hour of instruction devoted exclusively to substance abuse or mental health issues and the legal profession. The amendments...are effective March 1, 2011, the start of the next annual reporting period.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

have been at the forefront of equality. The proof of the wrong is apparent when you view our Bar's composite photograph of 1968 which shows African-American lawyers, all active leaders in the community, who were that year admitted to membership in our association. Among them are members who became a United States District Judge, a Judge of the South Carolina Court of Appeals, a Judge of the South Carolina Family Court and a City of Columbia Municipal Judge. All were highly regarded and served or are serving with distinction.

As individuals, we handled cases with and against them. Many of us had close professional or personal relationships with them. But as an association, we treated them badly by denying them the full opportunity to enjoy the professional bond that comes from an association of peers. We were wrong, and we are sorry. Our apology is late, but it is sincere.

HEALTH & FITNESS

Fall is upon us, and this means many things for many people: (1) for the parents among us, it means a return to the school routine; (2) for the sportsfans (whether your veins run red or orange - even those of you whose alma mater is neither, you pick a side in this statewide rivalry, admit it), it's college football; (3) for the outdoorsmen, there's a lot of game in season; (4) for the soccer moms and dads, there're games EVERY weekend; (5) and of course, who can forget the annual event featuring the very best in people watching anywhere - the State Fair. Somewhere, sometime, somehow, someway, as all this is going on, Richland County quits clinging to the heat of summer, and cooler weather sets in. This means two things. At every single one of these venues, I betcha a nickel that every single one of you will engage in the exact same activity - you will all enjoy and/or provide beverages. And because it's not as hot, you may find yourself drinking more for pleasure and less for the overt purpose of replacing depleted fluids. In this context, I encourage all of you not to underestimate the benefits of water for staying properly hydrated.

Now, now, you in the back, waving your foam "#1" glove at me and angrily denouncing the lunacy of even thinking of foregoing your barley-pops at the tailgate, I'm not a water-nazi. I'm not proposing anything extreme here - just that you remember the importance of remaining hydrated. I hope I'm not the first one to tell you that alcoholic beverages DE-hydrate you. As a result, throw some water bottles in the cooler too, that's all (well that, and remember to drink them). And don't stop drinking water after the game, because that feeling the next morning, you know the one, is often a result of your being dehydrated overnight.

This is because water is necessary for many, many bodily functions: it transports vitamins, minerals, amino acids, glucose, hormones, and enzymes throughout your body; it facilitates critical chemical reactions; it lubricates your joints, eyes, nasal passages, and intestines; it maintains your internal body temperature; and it removes waste from the body. Depending upon numerous variables, including age and obesity, water comprises anywhere from 78-55% of your body. We all know that our bodies will die from lack of water long before we die from starvation. But long before that, the effects of inadequate hydration can affect our bodies.

Our bodies remain in a constant state of water loss, through excretion through the skin, and even your every breath. Should we consume insufficient quantities to replace this output, the body will begin to prioritize water usage. The top priority is the blood. Without sufficient fluidity, the blood reduces its ability to adequately transport the necessities of life to the cells throughout your body. Dehydration can restrict your capillaries, which are where most of the important exchanges in the circulatory system occur by enabling the exchange of water, oxygen, carbon dioxide, and many other nutrient and waste chemical substances between the blood and surrounding tissue. Dehydration can also lead to increased blood pressure as the body struggles to pump blood through the body.

It does not stop there. As a person becomes dehydrated, water is drawn from the synovial fluid around the joints, which can lead to joint pain. Fluid helps the discs in the spine remain properly spaced, similar to a hydraulic support system, so dehydration can increase the likelihood of back pain. Heartburn can be the result of water shortage in the upper part of the gastrointestinal tract. Dehydration can also negatively affect the digestive system.

Yes, you over there by the Suburban, I understand the allure of being the cool parent that bestows the largesse of sugary drinks and/or caffeination to minors, but please consider that water is healthier for both their minds and bodies. As the percent intake of sugary and caffeinated beverages rises in children, so too do symptoms similar to the diagnoses of ADHD and hyperactivity. Just like alcohol, soda and other caffeinated beverages are diuretics that cause water loss. Juices and other sweetened drinks contain empty calories that have been attributed as a rising factor in childhood obesity. As a result, consider water for game days, and that or milk for their lunch boxes.

Alright, I hear you too, you billable machines out there who don't have time for thirst inducing activities. You're absolutely correct; no one will pay you for your time wasted away from your desk to get water, and it is a double-edged sword time-wise, because what goes in must come out. But consider that approximately 80% of your brain is water, and dehydration can also cause mental fatigue, affect memory retention, and even cause confusion. For the reasons discussed above, the coffee and soda machine aren't going to help the situation.

As for you Fair-goers, last year I saw a sign for fried Pepsi. FRIED Pepsi! It still boggles my mind- not only the why, but the how? Regardless, there can be no dispute that water is the better choice. So, Richland County, whether you're a health nut or a couch potato, you need to stay hydrated, and water is your best bet for a healthier, happier you!

Find us on Facebook

The RCBA now has an active Facebook page with a growing number of fans. Be sure to "like" the page so you can network with your fellow members, stay updated on all RCBA events, see posted photos, and more.

Howdy folks. It appears I'm off double-secret probation, as I've been allowed a few ¶s to remind you of our presence on the interweb. Our website was totally overhauled a couple of years ago. Have you seen the new layout? I'll not ask if you ever saw the old one, and can probably arrange a grant of amnesty if you'll go take a look at our happening new site.

While there, you'll learn that the Richland County Bar is the largest voluntary Bar in South Carolina and was established to promote the common business and professional interests of lawyers practicing and/or residing in Richland County, South Carolina. Membership has grown to over 1,700 attorneys. I know this because I cut and pasted it from the home page.

Fabulous home page aside, you can also find an online directory of all our members, many with pictures (and for those who don't have pictures, you aren't reduced to a graphic of a set of scales). You can register for RCBA events online, or read about the evolution and growth of the Association. You might even find that event photo that you hoped would go away forever after you destroyed all those copies of that issue of Richbar News. (Smile! Say cheese! Hey, what's that in my teeth?)

But wait—there's more! There's a nice summary of our mission statement and the Association bylaw, links to other midlands area county bar association sites, a link to our Facebook page, an archive of past issues of the Richbar News, and links to the decisions of various courts, including the South Carolina Administrative Law Court.

So don't wait—click on over and bookmark us. The RCBA welcomes your feedback on our website and invites you to register on our site to take advantage of all of the benefits that your membership provides.

NOMINATIONS DUE FOR ANNUAL AWARDS

It is again time to discuss the RCBA's important annual awards with your colleagues. We encourage you to submit your nominations for the Executive Committee to consider. The awards will be presented at the Annual Meeting of the RCBA on Thursday, December 9th at the Columbia Museum of Art. Members who wish to submit nominations must do so in writing to the Recognition Committee chair, Reece Williams, at receewilliams@ctrlawfirm.com.

"Tootie" Williams Award

The John W. Williams Distinguished Service Award, affectionately known as the "Tootie" Williams Award, is based upon distinguished and meritorious service to the legal profession or to the public in professional related activities.

The Williams Distinguished Service Award is the highest recognition given by our association and it is determined by the Executive Committee based upon written nominations from members of our association.

Past recipients of the award include Chief Justice Jean H. Toal, the Honorable Matthew J. Perry, the Honorable Carol Connor, the Honorable Robert Burnside, Tom McCutchen, Julian Nexsen, David Robinson, John Gregg McMaster, Alex Sanders, Ed Mullins, Jr., I.S. Leevy Johnson, Terrell Glenn, Julius McKay, Heyward McDonald, Jeter Rhoads, Lester Bates, Jr., Henry Hammer, the Honorable Jasper Cureton, Claude Scarborough, D. Reece Williams, Joe Berry, Jr., Luther Batiste, William C. Hubbard, and Ken Suggs.

Civic Star Award

The Executive Committee of the RCBA also selects an attorney to receive the Civic Star Award from among the nominees submitted by the membership.

The Civic Star Award is based upon exceptional and meritorious service to the Richland County community by a member of the RCBA for activities outside of the legal profession. Commitment to community service is important to the members of RCBA. Most members volunteer in the community and some give many hours of their time and talents. Sometimes only their friends and co-workers know the depth of their giving.

Matthew J. Perry, Jr. Civility Award

The Civility Award of the RCBA is named after the US District Judge Matthew J. Perry, Jr. It is awarded to the judge and to the lawyer who, in the opinion of the Executive Committee of the RCBA, best exemplifies the word "civility." The Executive Committee recognizes that it is a high honor to be nominated or selected for this recognition as attorneys perform their responsibilities in various capacities of the legal profession.

The past recipients of the award include the Honorable G. Thomas Cooper, Danny Crowe, the Honorable Casey Manning, the Honorable Bratton Davis, Jim Leventis, Susi McWilliams, the Honorable Marvin "Buddy" Kittrell, Bobby Fuller, and the Honorable George James.

ANNUAL FREE ETHICS SEMINAR

The RCBA's annual free ethics seminar will be held on Friday, November 5, 2010 at the University of South Carolina School of Law's auditorium. This year's program will include Chief Justice Jean Toal, who will be speaking on "Civility: Does it Matter?" Her presentation will be followed by attorney Amy Hill, of Sowell Gray Stepp & Laffitte, LLC, and attorney Peter Protopapas, of Lewis and Babcock, LLP, who will be speaking on ethical pitfalls for the lawyer starting a law practice. Following their presentations, Professor John Freeman will speak on ethics you weren't taught in law school. The next speaker of the morning will be Reece Williams, of Callison Tighe & Robinson, LLC, who will be speaking on the subject of electronic discovery. This presentation will be followed by a talk by R. Davis Howser of Howser, Newman & Besley, LLC, on ethics and legal malpractice. The program will conclude with a presentation by Professor Robert Wilcox on recent decisions regarding the unauthorized practice of law.

Registration will begin at 8:00 am and your printed material will be provided at that time. A complimentary continental breakfast will be provided before the program begins, with refreshments at the break. The program will be begin at 9:00 am and will end at 12:15 pm. The program is approved for three hours of ethics credit.
